Description:

If your student doesn't know his North from his South or thinks that Africa is a country, then this course is for them. Even if your student is a geography enthusiast and can name all the countries of Asia from largest to smallest, there is something for him in this class. We will begin by learning the basics of map reading and the geologic factors that shape all seven continents. Each students will learn how climate, geographic features, population, and religion help to mold cultures and countries. A bit of history will also be discussed to better understand the current political boundaries of each country. Each week, the students will fill in blank continent maps and answer work sheet questions, both of which will be graded each class period. Current event reports and a comprehensive test will be assigned at the end of each continent. Internet assignments will also use Google Earth as it gives us a birds eye view of God's amazing world. A whole lot of fun is had in this class as we travel the world from the comoforts of our chairs.
